To Assist Nature

In restoring diseased or wasted tissue i all that any medicine can do. In pulmonary affections, such as Colds, Bronchitis, and Consumption, the mucous membrane first becomes inflamed, then accumulations form in the air-cells of the lungs, followed by tubercles, and, finally, destruction of the tissue. It is plain, therefore, that, until the hacking cough is relieved, the bronchial tuber can have no opportunity to heal Ayer's Cherry Pectoral

Soothes and Heals the inflamed membrane, arrests the wasting process, and leaves no injurious results. This is why it is more highly esteemed than any other pulmonary

L. D. Bixby, of Bartonsville, Vt., writes: "Four years ago I took a severe cold, which was followed by a terrible cough. I was very sick, and confined to my bed about four months. My physician finally said I was in contion, and that he could not help me. One of my neighbors advised me to try Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. I did so, and before I had taken half a bottle was able to go out. By the time I had finished the bottle I was well, and have remained so ever since."

Alonzo P. Daggett, of Smyrna Mills, Me., writes: "Six years ago, I was a traveling salesman, and at that time was suffering with Lung Trouble.

For months I was unable to rest nights. I could seldom lie down, had frequent choking spells, and was often com pelled to seek the open air for relief. I was induced to try Ayer's Cherry Pectoral, which helped me. Its continued use has entirely cured me, and, I believe, saved my life."

MARRIED IN HASTE.

The night before my welding day! Was ever night so full of hours-were ever hours so full of dreary minutes, that eemed to cray I after each other through its dead, cold gloom?
Yet it was, by my own consent, to be my wedding day to morrow. I had said it; I had not only said it, but I had said I should never repent.

As the early dawn breaks through the gloom of night I hear the old cock in the farm yard give a dismal hoot preparatory

I wonder vaguely where are my bridesmaids, where are my father and mother! Bah! why of course they are dead long, long ago. I have only my old uncie, and lest lying bedridden at Norlington farm.

"And so," she said, "you have gone and lost a fortune—last a fortune to get married!"

How could be be here! The only thing on my finger. I look at it in a kind of fear as I draw my old kid glove over it before leaving the house into which Norah Glennie had gone a few minutes ago, and out of which now a white, startled woman was issuing— "Don't be so distressed, my darling! Don't look so or I cannot bear it!

I draw a deep breath; I stretch out my hand, a little wildly, I suppose, for he takes it firmly in his and lays it on his arm as he hurries through the streets back again in the direction of the railway

Once more we are in the train. "Mine-mine forever! I do not fear the future now!" is all my husband says, but there is a world of love in his eyes. Poor William! In a week's time he will be on the ocean and we will have arted for many months-perhaps years. lie lets me rest quietly in his arms during the very short journey back again to Norlington. I get out of the train alone, s he is going on some business two sta ons further on: then he will come back "Before you go into this room, wife, darling, you will take it off!" and he touches my finger, on which the bright

The train goes on, and I am alone. I see his face look at me from the window, darmed and anxious; but I nod reassur ingly and he smiles.

It causes no remark that I have been out o early this morning, for everything late ly is so upset by reason of my uncle's ill-ness and William's near departure. Then, again, there is only old Betty in the kitchen; and perhaps she scarcely knows I have been out; and if the nurse who has been called in to attend my uncle knows, she, doubtless, thinks I have been little what I give for their gowns, as are town on some household errand

During the day my old uncle is taken much worse and he will let no one be near him but me. William comes in and out of the room, but I am tied to it nearly all of the room, but I am tied to it nearly all the day, till towards evening my uncle fails into a deep sleep and I can safely leave him with his nurse. It was a rambling old house, Norlington Farm, and it had been my only home now for nearly seven years, all of which time William Mapleson had lived as my uncle's steward and been my only home proof.

CONSTITUTIONAL CATARRH. No single disease has entailed more suffer-ing or hastened the breaking up of the consti-tution than Catarrh. The sense of smell, of interior than Catarrh. The sense of smell, of laste, of sight, of hearing, the human voice, the mind—one or more, and sometimes all, yield to its destructive influences. The poison it distributes throughout the system attacks every vital force, and breaks up the most robust of constitutions. Ignored, hecause but little understood, by most physicians, impotently assailed by quacks and chartatans, those suffering from it have little hope to be relieved of it this side of the grave. It is time, then, that the popular treatment of this terrible disease by remedies within the reach of all passed into hands at once competent and trustworthy. The new and hitherto untried method adopted by Dr. Sanford in the preparation of his Radical Cure has won the hearty approval of thousands. It is instantaneous in affording relief in all head colds, sneering, snuming and obstructed breathing, and rapidly removes the most oppressive symptoms, clearing the head, sweetening the breath, restoring the senses of smell, taste and hearing, and neutralizing the constitutional tendency of the disease towards the lungs, liver and kidneys.
